$100,000,000 BOND DRIVE IN 1965 TO INITIATE NEW INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT IN ISRAEL

American and Canadian Jewish leaders voted to raise $100,000,000 in 1965 through the sale of State of Israel Bonds to finance the first phase of a five-year plan for expanding the industrial development of Israel, at a three-day National Planning Conference in New York following a request from Prime Minister Levi Eshkol, of Israel. The Israel leader called for the adoption of a $100,000,000 quota for the worldwide Israel Bond campaign in the current year "to enable Israel to provide employment for the waves of immigrants from East and West who we hope will join us in the years ahead."

Stressing its increased dependence on Israel Bonds, Mr. Eshkol declared that Israel's foreign currency income must stem more and more from "our own export earnings and from Israel Bond sales" because German reparation payments end this year. The Israel Prime Minister also pointed out that "an economically strong Israel is the best deterrent of war and guarantee for peace."

More than 300 Jewish leaders from various parts of the United States and Canada adopted a program for the wider sale of Israel Bonds to finance the establishment of new industrial communities in the undeveloped regions of Israel in order to sustain an increase of 500,000 in the population by 1970. At present Israel has a population of 2,500,000.

Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, vice-president of the Israel Bond Organization, reported that an unprecedented total of $85,380,350 in State of Israel Bonds was sold in 1964 in the United States and other parts of the free world, exceeding the $85,000,000 quota for 1964 by $380,350. The amount raised in the 1964 Israel Bond drive, he said, constituted a record for the campaign, representing by far the largest sum sold in any year during the fourteen-year history of Israel Bonds. It was an increase of more than 23 per cent over 1963, when $69,172,050 in Israel Bonds were sold, and it was the first time since the Israel Bond Organization was established in 1951 that it had attained an annual quota.

Expressing the hope that hatred will soon be banished from the Middle East, Abraham Feinberg, president of the Israel Bond Organization, stressed that Israel was prepared to share in a development program to benefit all the countries of the region, comparable to President Johnson's anti-poverty program and his blueprint for the Great Society. He said: "With our help through Israel Bonds, Israel has become a living example of self-help, human dignity and devotion to freedom. Given conditions of reconciliation and peace with the Arab States, Israel could well help to lead its underdeveloped neighbors out of the grip of poverty and disease and contribute to the creation of a society of understanding, brotherhood and economic prosperity for the entire region."

Samuel Rothberg, National Campaign Chairman of Israel Bonds, reported that investments

ZIM ASKS $2.3 MILLION FOR DAMAGES TO SHALOM IN COLLISION

The owners of the Israeli luxury liner Shalom have filed a $2.35 million suit against the Norwegian owners of the Stolt Dagali. They charge that the tanker was "in charge of incompetent personnel" when the two vessels collided in a fog off southern New Jersey last Thanksgiving Day, says the New York Times. Nineteen crew members of the 19,150-ton tanker were lost after the $20 million liner sliced through the 70-foot breadth of the tanker slightly aft of her bridge housing.

The Shalom, outbound from New York for a Caribbean cruise limped back into port under her own power. The stern section of the tanker sank shortly after the collision and its bow section with 24 survivors was later towed to a New York shipyard.

Lawyers for Zim Israel Navigation Company, Ltd., filed the "libel and complaint" in the United States District Court for the Southern District of New York. The complaint listed nine charges against the tanker owners.

The damage sought consisted of $1.9 million for the repair of the liner and the loss of profits while it was in a shipyard and $450,000 to meet the claims of the representatives of the crewmen who lost their lives.

Zim had agreed to pay the $450,000 to seamen's survivors under an arrangement made with the tanker's owners prior to initiation of legal action, says the New York Times. The Shalom brief, filed by Eugene F. Gilligan of the admiralty firm of Hill, Betts, Yamaoka, Freehill & Longcope, denied the liner was at fault in the collision. It charged that the tanker:

Was unseaworthy and in charge of incompetent personnel.

Failed to maintain a proper lookout.

Was proceeding at "immoderate and excessive speed" in fog.

Upon hearing fog signals of another vessel forward of her beam, failed to stop her engines.

Failed to employ information showed by her radar observations.

Negligently altered course "so as to bring herself across what should have been known to be the Shalom course."

Other charges included assertions that the tanker failed to stop her headway and to comport herself in accordance with the requirements of seaman-like fog navigation. The brief said the ship's officers did not navigate "with the caution required by the circumstances and instead conducted her navigation in a reckless and careless manner."

A/S Ocean of Oslo was named as the tanker's owner and the brief called for an attachment of the forward section of the tanker and its cargo.

In describing the 25,320-ton liner's actions prior to the collision, the brief said the weather was clear with a visibility of seven miles, reports the New York Times, when the Shalom passed Ambrose Light Vessel at 1:12 a.m.

The owners of Israel's flagship were accused of operating the 25,339-ton luxury liner Shalom with "careless, incompetent, and inattentive" personnel who were responsible for a collision that cost the lives of seamen.

The charges were made in Federal District Court by attorneys for A/S Ocean, owners of the Norwegian-flag tanker Stolt Dagali. The liner and the tanker collided in fog-enshrouded waters off the New Jersey coast last Thanksgiving Day. The motorship was inbound into New York with a cargo of safflower oil and coconut oil.

The charges against the Shalom were filed by Gordon W. Paulsen, of the admiralty law firm of Haight, Gardner, Poor & Havens, in an answer to the Zim libel petition.

Among the twenty-eight allegations made by Mr. Paulsen were charges that:

The Shalom's radar sets were not properly maintained or were mishandled.

Those in charge of the passenger liner's navigation "were not adequately trained" in the use of radar to interpret properly the information given by the set.

The Shalom proceeded at "an excessive and immoderate speed" from the time she took her departure from Ambrose Light vessel and even after she entered fog.

The answer contended that the master of the tanker "noted that the Shalom was on a collision course" and ordered a series of short whistle blasts after he noted that the liner was not reducing speed but was "continuing to close fast."

Mr. Paulsen said that visibility was approximately five or six miles when the "pip" of the Shalom was picked up by the motorship's radarscope, showing it to be about ten miles from the tanker's bow.

"When the Shalom's pip had closed to less than five miles without her light being observed, the Stolt Dagali's watch officer concluded that the visibility had reduced and commenced sounding fog signals, which were continued thereafter at about two-minute intervals as required by the International Rules of the Road," Mr. Paulsen said.

Despite the tanker's maneuvers to avoid a crash, "the Shalom, coming in at high speed, struck the Stolt Dagali broadside aft" and completely cut through the ship, he added.

Both sides are taking testimony from witnesses at the offices of Bigham, Englar, Jones & Houston, at 99 John Street, New York.

The master of the Israeli luxury liner Shalom rejected as "inaccurate" records kept aboard his ship in her collision last Thanksgiving Day with the Norwegian tanker Stolt Dagali.

The Shalom's skipper, Capt. Avner Freudenberg, finished two days of testimony at a court-ordered pre-trial examination of three damage actions against the tanker owners.

He declared that the accident occurred at 2:17 A.M. The ship's records indicated that it took place three minutes earlier. Another discrepancy revealed during Captain Freudenberg's testimony involved the exact location of the collision.

The court action was filed by Zim Israel Navigation Company, Ltd., Haifa, Israel against A/S Ocean, Oslo, Norway, owner of the tanker.

According to Captain Freudenberg's testimony the ship's position at the collision varied 1.75 miles from that recorded in Shalom's log and about 5.6 miles from that broadcast to the Coast Guard by the Shalom immediately after the crash, says the New York Times. Captain Freudenberg rejected as "inaccurate" the time sequence recorded in the Shalom's deck bellbook — a record of the times and types of engine manuevers rung up on the engine telegraph on the ship's bridge.

The book placed the time of the collision at 2:14 A.M. Captain Freudenberg insisted the crash did not occur until three minutes later. He based the estimate on entries made in the ship's engine-room bellbooks.

The captain was unable to explain why the maneuvering times for the ship's starboard engine were recorded in the port engine bellbook and vice versa, other than that "someone grabbed the wrong book."

The Shalom's master testified that he was summoned to the bridge two minutes before the crash took place in dense fog. When he arrived on the bridge, he said, he got a report that another ship had been sighted by radar 11 degrees off the starboard bow, at a distance of 1.7 miles.

He plotted this information and — allowing that the Shalom had traveled for two minutes at a speed of 20 knots — calculated that the other ship, presumably the Stolt Dagali, would have been still 1.1 miles away at the time of the crash.

In answer to a question, the captain agreed that if the ships collided two minutes after he reached the bridge, the Stolt Dagali must have been going at 33 knots, according to his calculations. The tanker is rated at 15 knots.

The attorneys who questioned Captain Freudenberg were Donald M. Waesche Jr., of the firm of Bigham, Englar, Jones & Houston; J. Edwin Carey, of Hill, Rivkins, Louis & Warburton; and Gordon W. Paulsen of Haight, Gardner, Poor & Havens. The captain was represented by Eugene F. Gilligan.

Three damage actions, involving about $2.7 million, have been brought against the owner of the tanker, says the New York Times. Actions against the owners of the $25 million Shalom, filed in Sweden and the United States, seek damage totaling about $1.6 million.

Israel Gets $80 Million in Modern Arms 16-Month Program, Authorized And Paid For By Germany As Moral Duty

West Germany has begun, in cooperation with other European countries, to deliver eighty million in modern arms to Israel. The sixteen-month delivery program, which began last October, involves the shipment of helicopters, anti-aircraft guns, American-made tanks, and submarines, writes Arthur J. Olsen, in the New York Times. Chancellor Ludwig Erhard authorized the arms aid, for which the West German Government is paying, on the ground that West Germany has a moral obligation to contribute to the security of the Jewish state.

In doing so he over-rode the objections of some senior West German politicians, including Dr. Eugen Gerstenmaier, the President of the Bundestag or lower house of Parliament, who believes that Bonn should limit military aid to its North Atlantic Treaty allies.

The West German aid program has also evoked a sharp reaction from Arab governments. They have renewed threats to penalize Bonn by recognizing Communist East Germany. The United Arab Republic has intensified recruiting of German technicians to assist in its slowly progressing rocket project.

A tug-of-war is now under way between Bonn and Cairo over forty-five West German electronics technicians specially trained in the United States.

The men were recruited in the expectation that they would develop a guidance system for the Soviet SAM-2 missile system. This is understood to be the principal "hole" in the unfinished weapons system under development for several years in Cairo.

The struggle over the forty-five specialists has been carried on in a cloak-and-dagger atmosphere, according to persons intimately involved, says the New York Times. The men became involved in the Middle East power struggle as a result of their training at the California headquarters of Litton Industries, a major United States electronics concern.

Litton supplies the navigation system for the F-104G aircraft used by the West German, Dutch, and Belgian air forces, and it operates a West German subsidiary at Freiburg in southern Germany.

Employees of the Litton subsidiary, the forty-five specialists were trained in the United States in anticipation of a contract for the Freiburg concern, which ultimately did not come through. They were dismissed last year upon their return to West Germany and were quickly approached by Arab "talent scouts."

The technicians accepted job offers carrying promises of high salaries and assurance that they would not be involved in military work, informed sources said.

Only fifteen of the men reported for work in Cairo, however. Two returned to West Germany after several weeks with the report that none had yet been paid a salary and that their task was in fact to develop a guidance system for the United Arab Republic's ground-to-ground rocket, which now exists in prototype.

West German interests, with former Defense Minister Franz Josef Strauss playing a prominent role, persuaded the remaining thirty specialists to remain in West Germany. All were given jobs at the Boelkow Company, of Munich, a leading concern in the fledgling West German aerospace industry.

Those who are still in Cairo are subject to conflicting German and Egyptian pressures, informed sources said, according to the New York Times, with at least some rumored not to be free to leave the United Arab Republic.

In recent months Bonn has lured out of the United Arab Republic many of the several hundred German-speaking technicians at work on the rocket project. But a number of new recruits are reported to have arrived.

The West German Government has carried out a quasi-secret military aid program to Israel for several years. The basic agreement is believed to have been made by former Chancellor Konrad Adenauer and former Premier David Ben-Gurion when they met in New York in 1960.

The new $80 million phase now under way involves cooperation among France, Spain, Switzerland, Sweden, and Finland as well as West Germany, which pays the whole bill and will provide most of the material. Some of the countries are believed to be involved only as forwarding agents.

The United States is not directly involved, but it is known to have been consulted by Bonn and to have endorsed the undertaking.

The first elements of the Palestine Liberation Army, approved in principle by the Arab chiefs of state last September have started training in Egypt, Syria and Iraq, according to Ahmed Shukairy, chairman of the Palestine Liberation Organization, says the New York Times. In an interview published in the weekly magazine Akher Saa, Mr. Shukairy said that an army of Palestine refugees was being set up on "the pattern of the Algerian Liberation Army" and might draw upon veterans of the Algerian war against the French for training officers.

FEDERAL IMMIGRATION OFFICIALS CONFER ON "NEW LOOK"

A "new look" was the objective of a conference of senior Federal Immigration officials held at the Chateau Frontenac in Quebec City, the reorganization of the Eastern February 3, 4, and 5. Senior officers are studying and discussing ways and means of implementing Region (Quebec), of which Leo R. Vachon is Regional director. R. B. Curry, Assistant Deputy Minister (Immigration) heads the senior officers from Ottawa. The Region is represented by thirty-five officers from the nineteen local Immigration Offices in the Province of Quebec.

The reorganization of the department was forecast in a public announcement last August by the Honourable René Tremblay, Minister of Citizenship and Immigration. The delegates are primarily concerned with a re-appraisal and the re-organization of their services in the Province of Quebec. The roles they might play in cooperation with other local agencies in assessing manpower requirements are being studied as well as methods to improve the reception of immigrants and the facilities for their early integration into the community. The Conference then will consider the organization necessary to plan and execute the programs dictated by these roles.

The Province of Quebec absorbs about 25 per cent of the newcomers coming to Canada, a large portion of which are skilled immigrants who contribute substantially to economic expansion. With the continued economic growth of the Province and Canada as a whole, the need for an even greater flow of skilled immigrants is being stressed by authorities. The regional conference follows a January meeting in Ottawa of Immigration Regional Directors from Canada and abroad.

$100,000,000 BOND DRIVE IN 1965 TO INITIATE NEW INDUSTRIAL DEVELOPMENT

amounting to $1,100,000,000 will be required to finance Israel's industrial development program during the period from 1965 to 1970. Of this amount $327,000,000 will go to establish 49,000 workers in industrial plants in new development zones, or at the rate of $6,700 per person.

"Industrialization has become the paramount need," Mr. Rothberg explained, "because it is no longer feasible from an economic point of view to settle large numbers of people on the land. This means that the Government of Israel must establish new industries in the undeveloped part of the country where most of the new inhabitants, new immigrants as well as native-born citizens, must be absorbed between now and 1970."

Louis H. Boyar, of Los Angeles, chairman of the Board of Governors of the Israel Bond Organization, announced that during 1964 the State of Israel paid out $24,695,700 to investors in the United States on maturing Israel Bonds presented for redemption. The holders of these Bonds received 150 cents on every dollar invested. In 1965, he said, approximately $43,000,000 will be paid by Israel on Israel Bonds which fall due for redemption.

The 1965 campaign for Israel Bonds will be formally launched at an international inaugural conference, on February 19-21, at the Fontainebleau Hotel, in Miami, Florida. Vice-President Hubert H. Humphrey and Deputy Prime Minister Abba Eban, of Israel, will be special guests at the conference, which will honor Sir Isaac Wolfson, noted British industrialist and philanthropist.

one cup sugar
one-half teaspoon baking soda
one and one-half cups flour
one-half cup walnuts

one can or envelope mushroom soup mix
one tablespoon instant minced onion
one four-pound chuck beef roast cut into one and one-half inch thick

Bake in moderate oven at three hundred and fifty degrees for three hours. Remove from oven. Reset temperature control to broil. Slit foil across top and fold back; being careful not to let gravy run out. Broil roast five minutes or until top is brown. Carve into one-quarter inch-thick slices; serve with gravy from foil. A SOCIOLOGICAL ANALYSIS OF CONTEMPORARY ORTHODOXY

By Charles S. Liebman, Assistant Professor of Political Science at Yeshiva University, in New York, in "Judaism", publication of the American Jewish Congress; reprinted with permission

Characteristics of the Orthodox Groups

Four categories of Jews, all of whom are nominally affiliated with Orthodox institutions, have been identified. It is suggested that the major characteristics distinguishing the groups, particularly the three observant groups, are in their attitudes. Their attitudes in turn, generally find expression in religious behavior, institutional identifications, perceived leaders, and is related to the period of immigration.

There is, however, much overlapping. No institution, for example, is entirely the captive of one group or another. There are divergent trends within almost every institution.

For example, it appears to an observer with perhaps superficial impressions that the Union of Orthodox Rabbis and Agudas Israel are basically "ultra-traditionalist," but the latter group certainly contains a sprinkling of younger and far more active "traditionalists" who in some respects are rebels in their own camp (the new Agudas Israel publication, The Jewish Observer, probably reflects this point of view).

The RAA and the Association of Orthodox Jewish Scientists tend to "traditionalism." The former are pulled somewhat to "ultra-traditionalism" and the latter to "modern Orthodoxy." The Religious Zionists of America, the Rabbinical Council of America, and the Rabbinical Alumni of Yeshiva University, numerically and financially the strongest supra-Orthodox institution in the U.S., tend to be dominated, at least administratively, by the "modern Orthodox."

However, all face leadership problems. Orthodoxy defines itself by a commitment to Halachah as the binding force in Jewish life. Interpretation of Halachah rests with the "Gidolim." "Modern Orthodoxy" has not been able to develop its own "Gidolim." Consequently it must continually look beyond its own ranks for ultimate sanction. In addition, there are many "traditionalists" elements among rank-and-file adherents of these institutions as well.

The nature of Orthodoxy has been painted in broad strokes, but hopefully a more careful study based on institutional histories and a sampling of attitudes and religious behavior of representative Orthodox respondents would refine the categories and make the differences more explicit. The task, of course, would be to identify and categorize both attitudes and institutions, and account also for the respondents affiliated with institutions whose attitudes deviate from their own.

C.J.C. Delegation Calls On Archbishop Of Montreal To Express Appreciation

A delegation of the Canadian Jewish Congress called on the Archbishop of Montreal, Paul-Emile Cardinal Leger, and conveyed to him the appreciation of the Jewish community for the support given by the Cardinal to the Vatican document on Jews during the debate at the Ecumenical Council.

The Congress delegation comprised: Michael Garber, Q.C., president of Congress; Harold Lande, Q.C., a national vice-president; Lavy M. Becker, chairman of the National Foreign Affairs Committee; Rabbi I. J. Teicher, National Religious Welfare Committee; and Saul Hayes, the executive vice-president of Congress.

Mr. Garber, handed a letter to the Cardinal, referring to the statement made by the Cardinal at the Ecumenical Council that the Vatican document on Jews "seemed like a necessary act for a Church in the throes of modernization which wants to approach the non-Christian world and engage with it in a brotherly dialogue"; and stating that "Jews all over the world have received this important declaration of the Council Fathers with deep satisfaction" and that "Jews of Montreal have been particularly moved by the representations" of the Cardinal and "are proud to see the Archbishop of Montreal take such a brotherly position." The letter stated that "the spirit which at this time animates the whole Catholic Church can only have the most beneficial effects on the relationships between Christians and Jews in Canada".
